

A Covenant from Källan

You who stand at the threshold, Seeker, hold this missive close. You have come to Källan, the Source, not for answers, but for the clarity to find your own.

Your journey is etched into the land itself. The runic challenge is a pact between your spirit and the wild. Do not merely search; you must learn to see.

The First Mandate: The Eye's True Sight The rune is not an object placed, but a pattern revealed. Seek it where shadow kisses stone, where moss charts the slow path of years, where wind and water have carved their ancient grammar. Look for the land's signature.

The Second Mandate: The Wisdom of Silence Still your thoughts until they are as quiet as a forest tarn at dawn. Listen past the wind. Hear the groan of the mountain's bones, the whisper of the birch, the hum of life unseen. In that profound silence, your path will resonate.

The Third Mandate: The Open Heart The final clue is not in the landscape, but within you. The rune will present itself when you are ready to receive its meaning. Ask not only "Where is it?" but "What does it ask of me?" Let its form stir a memory, a question, a truth you had forgotten.

This parchment is your anchor. When your trail feels cold or your purpose wavers, return to these words.

The Source is within and all around. Go now. The living landscape is waiting.
